Evaluate Mac with confidence

Test devices, gather user feedback, and assess readiness for broader adoption.

See Mac in your environment

Healthcare environments are unique, and evaluating a new device requires more than a technical review alone. Organizations need to understand how Mac performs in real clinical and administrative workflows while also assessing what's required to support it at scale.

SHI combines hands-on device testing with a readiness assessment to help organizations evaluate how Mac supports existing workflows, technical requirements, and long-term goals before making larger technology investments.

Mac Test and Try

Put Mac devices in the hands of clinicians, administrators, and other designated users to see how they perform in everyday workflows. Gather direct feedback, evaluate workflow fit, and uncover questions or concerns before considering a broader deployment.

Mac Evaluation Utility

Review the systems and processes that support your environment, from identity and networking to application compatibility and device management. The assessment helps identify technical considerations, potential roadblocks, and the work required to support Mac more broadly.

Healthcare environments are complex, and a successful pilot often raises as many questions as it answers. SHI helps organizations understand what broader Mac adoption could look like by connecting user feedback, workflow considerations, and technical findings into a clear path forward.

A clearer picture of what's next

The goal isn't simply to test Mac. It's to better understand how it fits your users, workflows, and environment before making larger deployment decisions.

- See how Mac performs in day-to-day clinical and administrative workflows.
- Gather feedback from clinicians, administrators, and other designated users.
- Evaluate how Mac aligns with existing processes and user needs.
- Validate critical applications, peripherals, and accessories.
- Identify infrastructure, identity, networking, and management considerations.
- Address potential challenges before broader deployment.
- Determine what to do next based on your organization's findings.
